NEW CASSEROLES

JJAMBONG CASSEROLE

Jjambong is a hot and spicy seafood noodle soup in Korea. It's a classic example of the marrying of Chinese cooking techniques with Korean flavors. The noodle soup typically features seafood such as shrimp, clams, Calamari, and mussels, along with heaps of mixed vegetables. These abundant ingredients are enriched with a soup broth made of chicken, pork ribs, shrimp or anchovy. But to start, the ingredients are first stir-fried in a wok, flavored with aromatic garlic, ginger, scallion, soy sauce, and the distinctively vibrant Korean chili flakes

BUDAE SPICY SAUSAGE CASSEROLE

Soon after the Korean War, food was scarce in Seoul, South Korea. The dish often incorporates such modern ingredients as instant noodles and sliced American cheese. Other ingredients may include ground beef, sliced sausages, baked beans, minari, onions, green onions, tteok, tofu, chili peppers, macaroni, garlic, mushrooms, and other vegetables in season.

KALGUKSU & SEAFOOD CASSEROLE

Kalguksu (literally "knife noodles") is a Korean noodle dish consisting of handmade, knife-cut wheat flour noodles served in a large bowl with broth and other ingredients. It is traditionally considered a seasonal food, consumed most often in summer. Its name comes from the fact that the noodles are not extruded or spun, but cut.
