The Tale of the Gallagher Clan

It was the 1840s, potato famine & disease were savage
The Irish population was left badly ravaged
Fever and dysentery were relieved only by a Cholera
Particularly bad throughout the Limerick area.

Sailing onboard the John Melver,
Fleeing famine and disease was the family of Gallagher
Lawrence, wife Honarah, and his brother John
Set off for a new land in 1851

Taking notice for the very clothes they wore
John and Lawrence embarked for a distant shore
Heading for New South Wales, the Sydney Town colony
6-month-old Mary did not last the journey

Once on shore in a vast new land
The Gallaghers became a prosperous clan
Established in Maitland, until in 1854
The Gallaghers moved to south of Dungog in search of more

In 1853, Lawrence fathered a son
John James, or 'JJ', as he was to become
A great entrepreneur, JJ, travelled as a young man
Selling utensils and clothing with his horse and a van

JJ, travelled through Dungog, Street and the Manning River
Returning back through Wallamba and Binalu
In the 1870's near Larry's Flat, JJ, bought land around
With the hope of establishing a new and prosperous town

Now known as Krumbach, the Gallaghers poured in Lawrence and John bought all their kith and kin
He built the first post office in 1881
A general store, slaughterhouse and butchery were to come

In 1879 JJ, became a married man
Marrying a girl of Moy, named Mary Anne
JJ, then built the town's first hotel
And established a large and loyal clientele

For over a decade, Krumbach thrived
Til the railway was built and the population declined
The hotel was then run by Austin, JJ's son
Thence Brian, JJ's grandson, took over the hotel's run

And so tis a tale began in woe and poverty
But a fair land and hard work ended misery
A dynasty began with brothers Lawrence and John
And 1000s of pints shared continues four generations on.
